SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 14, 1971

Jurors in the murder trial of John Linley Frazier (above) gaze into the pool at the Ohta home Friday during a tour of Santa Cruz County. The Redwood City jury came here to see spots related to the slaying of Dr. Victor Ohta, his wife, their two sons and the doctor's secretary on Oct. 19, 1970. The bodies were found in the pool. Frazier is in center foreground of this photo taken by Sentinel Photographer Bill Lovejoy.

Surrounded by uniformed officers from two counties and newsmen, John Linley Frazier, 25, accused slayer of five people, walked Friday through the property off Cornwall Road—the area he once called home. Frazier was captured in a shack near the spot this picture was taken more than a year ago. His trial was moved to San Mateo County following a successful change of venue motion. 4 Tuna Boats Seized

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Four more U.S. tuna boats and a Canadian trawler were seized by Ecuador Saturday in stepped up dispute over territorial fishing rights off the coast of the American Tunaboat Association said. The latest seizures bring to 13 the number of American vessels seized in the past week. Ecuadorian fishing licenses, said ATA manager August Fehon. The Canadian boat, Atlantic Ocean Maid, was later released without paying a fine, Fehon said, because the ship was believed to have a fishing license recognized by the Ecuadorian government.

Frazier Jury Views Scene

By CLIFF JOHNSON
The jury in the Frazier murder trial, brought here from Redwood City to view the scene they previously had seen on a puppy and then kick a rusted-out car Friday afternoon. The incident, occurred when the eight-woman, four-man jury joined the 400 Cornwall Road address where John Linley Frazier, 25, lived and was charged following the Oct. 19, 1970, slaying of Dr. Victor Ohta, his wife, their two children and the doctor's secretary, Dorothy Colwallader.

Frazier, flanked by San Mateo County sheriff's deputies, was led by the jury from the four-roomed shack when a small puppy ran out to him. The defendant seemed content to be back in the area he once called home, and smiled frequently. The jurors in his house, once the home of his former who identified Frazier two days after the slaying, are now occupied by others. The inhabitants generally stayed away from the crash of 14 cars, lawmen and press.

Frazier's apparent good humor abated somewhat when the jury visited the scene of the Ohta slaying at 899 Redwood (left) Road, he was guided as he followed the jury through the burned-out Ohta home which is being repaired by executors of the estate. Presiding Judge Charles Francis kept newsmen out while the jury toured the house. The press was only excluded while the jury went through. Many had been inside prior to the arrival of the court, and Francis allowed other newsmen to look at the building after the jury had gone through. Francis pointed out areas pertaining to his case at the pool and at the driveways leading to the house. Earlier Friday the jury toured the rained-out San Lorenzo carrying newsmen followed the playing with the dog, which Valley in a bus as Chang and his San Mateo paired car newsmen crowded one another. Defense Attorney James Frazier, and a Santa Cruz Jackson pointed out areas shown on maps. A caravan of some 15 cars (Continued on Page 2)

Crewmen Subdue Armed Hijacker

CALGARY, Alta. (AP) — claiming he was a member of the rebel Irish Republican Army. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police identified him as Paul Joseph Cain, 27, of Calgary. After taking over the plane, the man fired a warning blast of his shotgun. None of the 118 passengers or a crew member was wounded. The passengers later were let off at Great Falls, Mont., but the command crew set wild journey continued.

The Canadian police said they recovered a quantity of explosives after the plane finally landed in Calgary. A sum of $40,000 that the hijacker picked up in Great Falls also was recovered by Canadian police. The plane's pilot, Capt. Vern Etkin, said it was a new experience that on the return to Calgary the short, curly haired man said he was going to bail out. Etkin said the hijacker had a time-wrapped package that contained a parachute. "I felt the man was bent on self-destruction" and would have blown the plane up, the pilot said. "I decided that drastic action had to be taken."

The hijacker asked for a package and Etkin offered him a fire ax. When the man put down his shotgun to cut the tines the captain said he realized this "might be the only chance I would get" to pick up the gun down the aisle as far as possible. (Continued on Page 2)

Frazier And Jury Visit Scene Of Ohta Slayings

(Continued from Page 1) Inspectors drove in advance of the bus and were waiting when it arrived at each location. Additional sheriff's units followed Frazier's guard when 1.4a Crowell Road property was visited.

Frazier allowed his guards the location of railroad tracks near the Rincon tunnel when the coroner stepped at a tunnel of Highway 3.

They traveled about 100 yards right down the hill. The tunnel was partially obscured by trees and a utility pole which accompanied the morning train.

Mrs. Virginia Ohta's station wagon was found in the tunnel the night following the first slayings. It had been driven up a section of tracks from a dirt road off Highway 3, set aside and abandoned.

The jury also visited that access road and looked down the tracks toward the tunnel.

Court was recessed until Monday shortly before 2 p.m. at the Ohta residence, and the jury and the defendant went back to Redwood City.

Monday morning, Defense Attorney James Jackson will begin cross-examination of Jerry Chang, a criminologist who Wednesday testified that a pocket knife

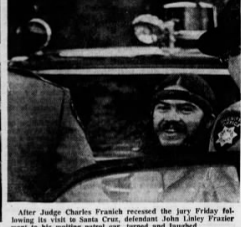

Frazier also carrying what he claimed had traces of copper in marks of the same material with the wire in a telephone which had been cut at the Ohta home.

John Lindsey Frazier peeps near the shack he called home to play with a puppy. Moments after this picture was taken Frazier the accused killer kicked a raised work of an automobile, abandoned nearby.

District Attorney Peter Chang indicates the Rincon tunnel as the Southern Pacific railroad tracks Friday about noon as jurors listen intently. The tunnel is where Mrs. Virginia Ohta's station wagon was abandoned the night after she and four others were slain. The Redwood City jury spent Friday morning in the rain-swept San Lorenzo Valley.

After Judge Charles Franich received the jury Friday following its visit to Santa Cruz, defendant John Lindsey Frazier went to his waiting patrol car, turned and looked.

Jurors, most dressed for blizzards over rough terrain, look at a spot at the Ohta swimming pool that District Attorney Peter Chang, left, indicated had been clipped by a bullet. The DA Friday also showed the jury stimulants they had previously seen in color photographs in the courtroom in Redwood City.

Lawrence, Jones and the defendant, John Lindsey Frazier, follow District Attorney Chang from the partially reconstructed Ohta residence Friday and walk in the direction of the swimming pool, where the five bodies were found by firemen more than a year ago. Frazier is in background, passes to gaze over land as the jury walked by.

Judge Charles Franich, left foreground, leads the Redwood City jury of the defendant, law, to the shack off Crowell Road Friday. San Lorenzo Sheriff, in charge of John Frazier, received heavy backing from local sheriff's deputies while the year was taking on the remote Crowell property.
